

PRE

Verse is not the effect of sudden thought; but this hinders not, that sudden thought may be represented in verse, since those thoughts must be higher than nature can raise without premeditation. Dryden on Dramatick Poetry.

PREMICES. n. f. [primitia, Lat. premisses, Fr.] First fruits.

A charger, yearly filled with fruits, was offered to the gods at their festivals, as the premisses or first gatherings. Dry.

PREMIER. adj. [French.] First; chief.

The Spaniard challengeth the premier place, in regard of his dominions. Comden's Remains.

Thus families like realms, with equal fate,
Are sunk by premier ministers of state. Swift.

TO PREMISE. v. a. [premissus, Lat.]

1. To explain previously; to lay down premises.

The apostle's discourse here is an answer upon a ground taken; he premisseth, and then infers. Burnet.

I premise these particulars, that the reader may know I enter upon it as a very ungrateful task. Addison.

2. To tend before the time. Not in use.

O let the vile world end,
And the premiss'd flames of the last day
Knit earth and heav'n together! Shakspeare, Henry VI.

TO PREME'RIT. v. a. [premereor, Lat.] To deserve before.

They did not forgive Sir John Hotham, who had so much premerited of them. King Charles.

PREMISES. n. f. [premissa, Lat. premisses, Fr.]

1. Propositions antecedently supposed or proved.

They infer upon the premises, that as great difference as commodiously may be, there should be in all outward ceremonies between the people of God, and them which are not his people. Hosker, b. iv. f. 7.

This is so regular an inference, that whilst the premises stand firm, it is impossible to shake the conclusion. Decay of Piety.

She study'd well the point, and found
Her foes conclusions were not found,
From premiss erroneous brought,
And therefore the deduction's nought. Swift's Miscel.

2. In low language, houses or lands; as, I was upon the premises.

PREMISS. n. f. [premissum, Lat.] Antecedent proposition.

This word is rare in the singular.

They know the major or minor, which is implied, when you pronounce the other premiss and the conclusion. Watts.

PREMIUM. n. f. [premiun, Lat.] Something given to invite a loan or a bargain.

No body cares to make loans upon a new project; whereas men never fail to bring in their money upon a land-tax, when the premium or interest allowed them is suited to the hazard they run. Addison's Freeholder, N^o 23.

People were tempted to lend, by great premiums and large interest; and it concerned them to preserve that government, which they had trusted with their money. Swift's Miscel.

TO PREMONISH. v. a. [premonere, Lat.] To warn or admonish beforehand.

PREMONISHMENT. n. f. [from premonish.] Previous information.

After these premonishments, I will come to the competition itself.

PREMONITION. n. f. [from premonish.] Previous notice; previous intelligence.

What friendly premonitions have been spent
On your forbearance, and their vain event. Chapman.

How great the force of such an erroneous persuasion is, we may collect from our Saviour's premonition to his disciples, when he tells them, that those who killed them should think they did God service. Decay of Piety.

PREMONITORY. n. f. [from præ and monere, Lat.] Previously advising.

TO PREMONSTRATE. v. a. [præ and monstrare, Lat.] To show beforehand.

PREMUNIRE. n. f. [Latin.]

1. A writ in the common law, whereby a penalty is incurable, as infringing some statute.

Premunire is now grown a good word in our English laws, by tract of time; and yet at first it was merely mistaken for a premonere. Bramhall against Hobbs.

Woolley incurred a premunire, forfeited his honour, estate and life, which he ended in great calamity. South.

2. The penalty so incurred.

3. A difficulty; a distress. A low ungrammatical word.

PRENOMINATION. n. f. [from prænominus, Lat.] An anticipation of objection.

TO PRENOMINATE. v. a. [prænominare, Lat.] To forename.

He you would found,
Having ever seen, in the prænominated crimes,
The youth, you breathe of, guilty. Shakspeare, Hamlet.

PRENOMINATION. n. f. [præ and nominare, Lat.] The privilege of being named first.

The watry productions should have the prænomination; and they of the land rather derive their names, than nominate those of the sea. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

PRENOTION. n. f. [prænotio, Fr. præ and notio, Lat.] Foreknowledge; prescience.

PRE

The hedgehog's preference of winds is so exact, that it stoppeth the north or southern hole of its nest, according unto prenotion of these winds ensuing. Brown.

PRENTICE. n. f. [contracted, by colloquial licence, from apprentice.] One bound to a master, in order to instruction in a trade.

My accuser is my prentice, and when I did correct him for his fault, he did vow upon his knees he would be even with me. Shakspeare, Henry VI.

PRENTICESHIP. n. f. [from prentice.] The servitude of an apprentice.

He serv'd a prenticeship, who sets up shop,
Ward try'd on puppies, and the poor his drop. Pope.

PRENUNCIATION. n. f. [prænunciatio, Lat.] The act of telling before.

PREOCCUPANCY. n. f. [from preoccupare.] The act of taking possession before another.

TO PREOCCUPATE. v. a. [preoccupare, Fr. preoccupare, Lat.]

1. To anticipate.

Honour aspires to death; grief flieth to it; and fear preoccupieth it. Bacon.

2. To prepossess; to fill with prejudices.

That the model be plain without colours, left the eye preoccupate the judgment. Watson's Architecture.

PREOCCUPATION. n. f. [preoccupatio, Fr. from preoccupare.]

1. Anticipation.

2. Prepossession.

3. Anticipation of objection.

As if, by way of preoccupation, he should have said; well, here you see your commission, this is your duty, these are your discouragements; never seek for evasions from worldly afflictions; this is your reward, if you perform it; this is your doom, if you decline it. South's Sermons.

TO PREOCCUPY. v. a. To prepossess; to occupy by anticipation or prejudices.

I think it more respectful to the reader to leave something to reflections, than preoccupy his judgment. Arbutnot.

TO PREOMINATE. v. a. [præ and ominare, Lat.] To pre-nominate; to gather from omens any future event.

Because many ravens were seen when Alexander entered Babylon, they were thought to preominate his death. Brown.

PREOPINION. n. f. [præ and opinio, Lat.] Opinion antecedently formed; prepossession.

Diet holds no solid rule of selection; some, in indistinct voracity, eating almost any; others, out of a timorous preopinion, refraining from very many things. Brown.

TO PREORDAIN. v. a. [præ and ordinare.] To ordain beforehand.

Sin is the contrariety to the will of God, and if all things be preordained by God, and so demonstrated to be willed by him, it remains there is no such thing as sin. Hammond.

Few souls preordain'd by fate,
The race of gods have reach'd that envied state. Rosam.

PREORDINANCE. n. f. [præ and ordinance.] Antecedent decree; first decree. Not in use.

These lowly courtiers
Might stir the blood of ordinary men,
And turn preordination and first decree
Into the law of children. Shakspeare, Julius Caesar.

PREORDINATION. n. f. [from preordain.] The act of preordinating.

PREPARATION. n. f. [preparatio, Lat. preparation, Fr. from prepare.]

1. The act of preparing or previously fitting any thing to any purpose.

Nothing hath proved more fatal to that due preparation for another life, than our unhappy mistake of the nature and end of this. Wake's Preparation for Death.

2. Previous measures.

I will shew what preparations there were in nature for this great dissolution, and after what manner it came to pass. Burnet's Theory of the Earth.

3. Ceremonious introduction.

I make bold to press, with so little preparation, upon you. —You're welcome. Shakspeare, Merry Wives of Windsor.

4. The act of making or fitting by a regular process.

In the preparations of cookery, the most volatile parts of vegetables are destroyed. Arbutnot on Aliments.

5. Any thing made by process of operation.

I with the chymists had been more sparing, who magnify their preparations, inveigle the curiosity of many, and delude the security of most. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

6. Accomplishment; qualification. Out of use.

Sir John, you are a gentleman of excellent breeding, au-thentick in your place and person, generally allowed for your many warlike, courtlike and learned preparations. Shakspeare.

PREPARATIVE. adj. [preparativus, Fr. from prepare.] Having the power of preparing or qualifying.

Would men have spent toilsome days and watchful nights in the laborious quest of knowledge preparative to this work. South's Sermons.

PREPARATIVE.

PRE

PREPARATIVE. n. f. [preparativus, Fr. from prepare.]

1. That which has the power of preparing or previously fitting.

They tell us the profit of reading is singular, in that it serveth for a preparative unto sermons. Hosker.

My book of advancement of learning may be some preparative or key for the better opening of the instauration. Bacon.

Resolvedness in sin can, with no reason, be imagined a preparative to remission. Decay of Piety.

2. That which is done in order to something else.

The miseries, which have ensued, may be yet, through thy mercy, preparatives to us of future blessings. K. Charles.

Such a temper is a contradiction to repentance, as being founded in the destruction of those qualities, which are the only dispositions and preparatives to it. South's Sermons.

What avails it to make all the necessary preparatives for our voyage, if we do not actually begin the journey. Dryden.

PREPARATIVELY. adv. [from preparative.] Previously; by way of preparation.

It is preparatively necessary to many useful things in this life, as to make a man a good physician. Hale.

PREPARATORY. adj. [preparatoire, Fr.]

1. Antecedently necessary.

The practice of all these is proper to our condition in this world, and preparatory to our happiness in the next. Tillotson.

2. Introductory; previous; antecedent.

Preparatory, limited and formal interrogatories in writing preclude this way of occasional interrogatories. Hale.

Rains were but preparatory, the violence of the deluge depended upon the disruption of the great abyss. Burnet.

TO PREPARE. v. a. [preparare, Lat. preparare, Fr.]

1. To fit for any thing; to adjust to any use; to make ready for any purpose.

Patient Octavia, plough thy visage up
With her prepared nails. Shakspeare, Ant. and Cleop.

Confound the peace establish'd, and prepare
Their souls to hatred, and their hands to war. Dryden.

Our souls, not yet prepar'd for upper light,
Till doomday wander in the shades of night. Dryden.

The beams of light had been in vain display'd,
Had not the eye been fit for vision made;
In vain the author had the eye prepar'd
With so much skill, had not the light appear'd. Blackmore.

2. To qualify for any purpose.

Some preachers, being prepared only upon two or three points of doctrine, run the same round. Addison.

3. To make ready beforehand.

There he maketh the hungry to dwell, that they may prepare a city for habitation. Psalms ciii. 36.

Now prepare thee for another fight.
He took the golden compasses, prepar'd
In God's eternal throne, to circumscribe
This universe. Milton.

4. To form; to make.

The woman fled into the wilderness, where she hath a place prepared of God to feed her. Rev. xii. 6.

He hath founded it upon the seas, and prepared it upon the floods. Psalms xxiv. 2.

5. To make by regular process: as, he prepared a medicine.

TO PREPARE. v. n.

1. To take previous measures.

Efficacy is a power of speech, which represents to our minds the lively ideas of things so truly, as if we saw them with our eyes; as Dido preparing to kill herself. Peacham.

2. To make every thing ready; to put things in order.

Go in, sirrah, bid them prepare for dinner. Shakspeare.

The long-suffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing. 1 Peter iii. 2.

3. To make one's self ready; to put himself in a state of expectation.

PREPARE. n. f. [from the verb.] Preparation; previous measures. Not in use.

In our behalf
Go levy men, and make prepare for war. Shakspeare.

PREPAREDLY. adv. [from prepared.] By proper precedent measures.

She preparedly may frame herself
To th' way she's forc'd to go. Shakspeare, Ant. and Cleop.

PREPAREDNESS. n. f. [from prepare.] State or act of being prepared: as, he's in a preparedness for his final exit.

PREPARER. n. f. [from prepare.]

1. One that prepares; one that previously fits.

The bishop of Ely, the fittest preparer of her mind to receive such a doleful accident, came to visit her. Wotton.

2. That which fits for any thing.

Coddled grains are an improver of land, and preparer of it for other crops. Mortimer's Husbandry.

PREPONDERANCE. n. f. [from preponderare.] The state of

PREPONDERANCY. n. f. [from preponderare.] The state of

As to addition of ponderosity in dead bodies, comparing them unto blocks, this occasional preponderancy is rather an appearance than reality. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

The mind should examine all the grounds of probability, and, upon a due balancing the whole, reject or receive proportionably to the preponderancy of the greater grounds of probability. Locke.

Little light boats were the ships which people used, to the sides whereof this fish remora fastening, might make it swag, as the least preponderance on either side will do, and so retard its course. Grew's Musaeum.

TO PREPONDERATE. v. a. [preponderare, Lat.]

1. To outweigh; to overpower by weight.

An inconsiderable weight, by distance from the centre of the balance, will preponderate greater magnitudes. Glanvill.

The triviallest thing, when a passion is cast into the scale with it, preponderates substantial blessings. Gow. of the Tongue.

2. To overpower by stronger influence.

TO PREPONDERATE. v. n.

1. To exceed in weight.

He that would make the lighter scale preponderate, will not so soon do it, by adding increase of new weight to the emptier, as if he took out of the heavier, what he adds to the lighter. Locke.

Unless the very mathematical center of gravity of every system be placed and fixed in the very mathematical center of the attractive power of all the rest, they cannot be evenly attracted on all sides, but must preponderate some way or other. Bentley's Sermons.

2. To exceed in influence or power analogous to weight.

In matters of probability, we cannot be sure that we have all particulars before us, and that there is no evidence behind, which may outweigh all that at present seems to preponderate with us. Locke.

By putting every argument on one side and the other into the balance, we must form a judgment which side preponderates. Watts.

PREPONDERATION. n. f. [from preponderare.] The act or state of outweighing any thing.

In matters, which require present practice, we must content ourselves with a mere preponderation of probable reasons. Watts's Logic.

TO PREPOSE. v. a. [proponere, Fr. proponere, Lat.] To put before.

PROPOSITION. n. f. [propositio, Fr. propositio, Lat.] In grammar, a particle governing a case.

A proposition signifies some relation, which the thing signified by the word following it, has to something going before in the discourse; as, Cesar came to Rome. Clarke's Lat. Gram.

PREPOSITOR. n. f. [propositor, Lat.] A scholar appointed by the master to overlook the rest.

TO PREPOSSESS. v. a. [præ and posse, Lat.] To fill with an opinion unexamined; to prejudice.

She was prepossessed with the scandal of salivating. Wizem.

PREPOSSESSION. n. f. [from prepossess.]

1. Preoccupation; first possession.

God hath taken care to anticipate and prevent every man to give piety the prepossession, before other competitors should be able to pretend to him; and to engage him in holiness first and then in bliss. Hammond's Fundamentals.

2. Prejudice; preconceived opinion.

Had the poor vulgar rout only, who were held under the prejudices and prepossessions of education, been abused into such idolatrous superstitions, it might have been pitied, but not so much wondred at. South's Sermons.

With thought, from prepossession free, reflect
On solar rays, as they the light respect. Blackmore.

PREPOSTEROUS. adj. [preposterus, Lat.]

1. Having that first which ought to be last; wrong; absurd; perverted.

Put a case of a land of Amazons, where the whole government, publick and private, is in the hands of women: is not such a preposterous government against the first order of nature, for women to rule over men, and in itself void? Bac.

Death from a father's hand, from whom I first
Received a being! 'tis a preposterous gift,
An act at which inverted nature starts,
And blushes to behold herself so cruel. Denham.

Such is the world's preposterous fate;
Amongst all creatures, mortal hate
Love, though immortal, doth create. Denham.
